After breakfast depart with lunch for full day game drive in the reserve culminating the Mara River. Return to the camp for dinner and overnight at the camp. This is the day to watch the migration. From the western Serengeti the herds head north, following the rains (or their effects) into Kenya and the Maasai Mara Game Reserve. On their trek the wildebeests' path is cut several times by rivers: in the Serengeti by the Mbalangeti and the Grumeti, and in Kenya by the Mara. For most of the year these rivers are relatively placid, but they can become violent torrents in response to rainfall in their catchments areas, and then they present major obstacles to the progress of the wildebeest. Return to the Camp for dinner and overnight.
